The chief topic of the street is still the Chrysolite fire, and the telegraphic news received from Leadville exerts its influence upon the Leadville stocks from day to day. Some of the Leadville papers and a large portion of the public consider the present condition of the mine the result of bad management and of collusion between the manager and " bears" in the stock here in New York. Others, however, and among them some of the best-known mining men, contend that the manager is doing all that can be done to extinguish the fire. The Mining Associated Press dispatches of last night from Leadville state that the situation on Fryer Hill is extremely critical; that it is feared that the Little Chief, Little Pittsburg and the north workings of the Chrysolite are in great danger, and that great excitement prevails. The unsatisfactory condition of the mines on Fiyer Hul is no doubt largely due to the discord existing between the managers of the various mines involved. On Thursday, for instance, a writ of injunction was obtained by the manager of the Little Pittsburg against the Little Chief, ordering all shafts of the Little Chief closed. The writ was, however, disregarded, and the blower being started on the Daly shaft of the Little Chief, an upcast was at once created, thus clearing the latter mine of smoke and gas, and giving the Amle time to protect her ground. Yesterday ground between the Little Chief, and Carboniferous claum was also blawn down by Manager Herrick of the Little Chief, and another blast was to be fired if necessary.

> A special to from New York says: Within the past six weeks most of the lelegates to the recent Protesisal Episcopal Convention have inspected the obelisk, and in consequence the policeman on goard has obtained a cientific and biblical knowledge con curning it which affords much in struction to all visitors. His accomplishments as an expert in the matter of obelisks are, however, doubted by the two apple women, who move their stands with the stone, and have their own opinions as to Cleopatra and her needle. The guardian of the stone is an Egyptian sulfor, brought by Lieutenant Co . mander Gorringe from Alexandria. This man patrols the top of the stone all day and part of the night, carrying a long cane with which he raps any boys or men who may come too near. No one is allowed within five feet of the platform upon which the obelisk rests. It has been found necessary to employ the watchman because of many attempts made to chip off pieces of stone l curiosity-hunters, and an insane de sire of small boys to color the political opinions of Pharaolis by the addition of " 329" in coalk. At present plasierers are engaged in taking a cast of the base of the . belisk, which has been worn and broken off until it could not be made to stand without support, as the base is now more round han square. The missing parts will he cast in one piece at bronze, into which the obelisk will be ficted. This species of gigantic bronze saucer will ske the place of the bronze crabs which were used to keep the stone straight in Egypt and were supposed to have been put there when it was moved to Alexandria.
